

Email Management for Lawyers

Email is one of the hardest parts of law firm life - you need to be reachable, but constant interruptions get in the way of focused work. Here are a few ways to strike a better balance.

Separate Your Inboxes

Keep personal and work email in separate inboxes. Turn off notifications for personal email. That alone cuts out a lot of unnecessary interruptions.

Batch Sync

Set your phone's email to sync at intervals (e.g., every 10 minutes) instead of in real time. You're still responsive but not getting pulled out of focus 3 times in 5 minutes.

Turn Off Computer Email Notifications

Computer Outlook notifications can't be batched - they're real-time or nothing. Turn them off and rely on your phone's batched notifications instead.

Get Buy-In First

Talk to supervisors before making changes. Frame it as a productivity gain.

Flag Your Real-Time Channels

Make sure people know how to reach you in real time - call, text, Teams, whatever the firm uses.